the AUTHOR of the DAILY GAZETTEER.

Believe the inclosed Letter, if inserted only for the sake of varying your Subjects sometimes, will be far from being disagreeable to the serious Part of your Readers, at least. I am, &c.

Nov. 25, 1740.

Though Enthusiasm (or over-much Righteousness) is reckoned a great Grievance in Matters of Speculative Religion; yet, I humbly conceive, the Nation labours under a more heavy one, with regard to Morality, or Religion that is Practical. Had I the Wit and Learning of Dr. T., I would write a Dissertation on the Nature, Policy, Sin, and Danger, of being Politic over-much. This (for aught I know) might be a Means of bringing the World of People to a right Frame of Mind; and consequently, of making them more moral, and better Christians. For as to being righteous over-much, Numbers of People are so averse to it, that they rather chafe to have little or no Religion at all. People's zeal for God's Glory may be sincere, tho' their Manner of shewing it may be faulty. Yet, faulty as it may be, the Almighty, who is the only Knower of Men's Hearts, may see less in it to be condemned, than in the Zeal to be praised. Some perhaps may call this Carrying, others may denominate it Methodism, tho' the Author professes neither of them.

However, be this as it will, it must be allowed on all sides, that let a Man be of what religious Sect he will, he cannot be called a good Christian, unless his Life be amiable. The Parson's Gown, the Presbyterian's Cloak, the Ramish Priest's Vestments, make no Men Saints. A good Man is known by his Life, as a good Tree is by its Fruit. A Person who lives a loose and dissolute Life, is so far from deserving the Name of Christian, that he scarcely is worthy the Name of Man. A good Christian honours his Maker, and is a good Subject and Patriot. In every Station and Capacity he has the true Interest of his King and Country at heart. As he is a Foe to all causeless Opposition, he is an Friend to Easy and Detraction.

Is God pleased with those who take Pleasure in gratifying their Lusts and Passions? Does the Almighty delight in People's decking their Outfides, and pumping their Bellies? Is passing Time away vainly, or spending it foolishly, pleasing to him who is All-good and All-wise? Does Hypocrisy respect him? Is Lying to his Honour? Is it to his Glory to use Flattery? Does Pride please him? Yet the Modestly-Polite think highly of those Things; tho' Reason tells them, that they who pursue them are wicked, and those who admire them, are Fools. If Men would take the same Pains to please their Maker, as they do to indulge themselves, it would be more to their Credit in this World, and to their Advantage in that which is to come.

As Mortals owe all they have to God, they ought to make him the only Object of their Love and Fear. If I might advise my Fellow-Creatures, I should think it more for their Reputation, to act the Part of good Christians and wise Men, than to behave like Libertines and Fools, tho' it be the Fashion: For the Praise of the former is an Honour, but the Commendation of the latter is a Scandal.

PHILOPATRUS.

Extract of Letters from Petersburg, Nov. 28.
THE Lutte of this Empire, and its Credit abroad, which must have suffer'd extremely if any longer had been shewn to the last Dispositions of the late Czarina, begin now to revive: for Nature has resum'd her Prerogatives: the Father and Mother have the Guardianship of their own Child; the nearest of Kin to the Imperial Crown, and the Person most interested to govern the Empire well, has taken the Reins of the Regency; and the Duke of Courland, who held them just 3 Weeks, is, with all his Family committed Prisoners in Schischelbourg, a fine Fortress to the East of this City, in an Isle of the River Neva, at the Place where after having been swell'd by the Lake Ladoga, it begins to resume the Form and Name of a River, a little before it loses itself in the German Ocean. The Duke, who is by Birth a Courlander, is descended from the Family of Buren, which is suppos'd to have been transplanted from Westphalia into Courland, with the Family of the Kettlers. When Fortune began to heap her Favours on him, he quitted his Westphalian Name, and took that of the Biron Family, one of the most illustrious in France, into which 'tis also said he got himself admitted.

From Constantinople, of October 4.

"The Ceremonial of the Exchange of the Ambassadors of the Porte and Russia has taken up more Time and met with more Obstructions than the Treaty of Peace did. The Conferences seem'd several times just ready to be broke off on both Sides; and the publick Peace was as often on the point of being sacrific'd to certain Syllables, Steps, and Motions, which were furiously insisted upon on one Side, and as stiffly refus'd on the other. But this arduous, this important Affair is at length agreed to and settled."

"The Plague continues to make great Havock in this City, so that near 2000 die sometimes in a Day. The Suburb of Pera is also infested with it, so that the Foreign Ministers who us'd to reside there have been oblig'd to retire to the Country; and to complete the publick Calamity, a Famine rages with the same Fury as the Pestilence. And besides these present Misfortunes, the restless and haughty Temper of the Grand Vizir gives a Prospect of others at a distance, every body being apprehensive that he will make some dangerous Innovations, if he be not hinder'd by the Persians."

From Rome, of November 26.

"Last Week the Maltese Ambassador had an Audience of the Pope, in which he acquainted his Holiness, that the Son of the late Bay of Tunis, a Friend and Ally of the Religion of St. John of Jerusalem, having taken Refuge at Malta, after the Death of his Father, was receiv'd there by the Grand Prior with all the Honours due to his Rank, and loaded with all manner of Careless by the Knights, who thought it no more than their Duty; but that M. Gualtieri, the Inquisitor of the Holy See in the Isle of Malta, was of another Opinion, and consequently had writ several Letters to them to make them break off all manner of Correspondence with the Mahometan Prince, threatening them even with Ecclesiastical Censures if they continued to visit and treat him as they had done; but the latter not attending to the extraordinary Zeal of the Inquisitor, and thinking themselves insulted by his Menaces, had form'd a Design to burn him in his Palace, and would surely have done it, if the Grand Master had not gone himself to the Spot, and engag'd them by his Authority to return to their Habitations. The Inquisitor has complain'd of this Affair to the Pope, and we are impatient to know whether his Conduct will be approved."

COUNTRY NEWS.

Leeds, Dec. 9. On Sunday last in the Afternoon it began to snow, and continued till Yesterday about Ten a Clock, when it changed to small Rain, which still continues. Such a Quantity of Snow and Wet has fallen as is almost incredible: the Roads in many Places are unpassable, and those much us'd are travell'd with great Difficulty.

Derby, Dec. 11. On Tuesday Morning last we had the greatest Inundation of Water here that ever was known, occasion'd by the falling of a great Quantity of Snow and Rain, which began on Sunday in the Afternoon, and continued almost without Intermission till Tuesday Morning; at which time, by the Overflowing of the Brooks, several Streets, and all the Rooms upon the Ground Floors, were laid a great Depth under Water, so that the Inhabitants were that Day confin'd to the upper Rooms of their Houses, many of them were in great Terror, fearing they and their little Tenements would have been swept away by the Torrent of Water. Great Damage has been done, not only to the Houses of the Inhabitants and their Furniture, &c. but several Walls have been thrown down, Bridges and great Quantities of Wood carried away, and Numbers of Cattle, swept from the Pastures, have perish'd. The Parish Church of St. Werberg receiv'd considerable Damage, it having made so great a Breach in the Pavement thro' out the Church, that it must be new pav'd.

LONDON.

Extract of a Letter from Bayonne, dated Dec. 10. N. S.

The Aviso sent by Admiral Torres is stranded about two Leagues from this Place, and brings the News of the Ferrol Squadron, except two, being arriv'd at Puerto Rico very much shatter'd by bad Weather. The St. Ignacio and another of the Caraccas Company Ships arriv'd at Port Passage three Days ago, with 13000 Fanegas of Cacao, and with them a Prize laden with Tobacco at the Caraccas, which the St. Ignacio took in her outward-bound Passage with Negroes, bound from the Coast of Africa.

In a Word, nothing in Nature can come near them for the cure of an almost immediate Cure of DEAFNESS, proceeding from what Cause soever; but the great Effect and Reputation they have justly gained for many Years past, have occasion'd (as usual in Cases) many Counterfeits to come abroad; beware therefore of such Impositions, these excellent and only true Specifick Drops, being to be had only, by the Author's Appointment, of the Great women at the two Blue Posts in Haydon-Yard, in the Strand, at 1 s. 6 d. a Bottle, with Directions, and no where else in England.
